

White Powders

Library Listing – 165 spectra

This library is particularly useful to Homeland Security and National Guard investigators. The White Powders Library consists of spectra of commonly found white powders.

The library includes 165 spectra of commercially available white powders (e.g., baking soda, flour, Vitamin C). Using this collection, unknown materials can be identified by their commercial names. A more complete identification, which includes chemical information, requires using this collection in combination with other libraries containing solvents, surfactants, polymers, norganic materials, synthetic fibers, oils and other materials.
